FEBRUARY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

DEERS FROM SHELTER ISLAND.

Five Islands

Two Private Islands, One Target Practice Island, One Victorian Resort And One Disease Center

By Dan Rattiner

Fifty million years ago, the great glacier rumbled south from Canada, got as far south as this random point we call latitude forty two degrees today, and then stopped. Over the next half billion years, it proceeded to melt, leaving this great heap of rocks, sand, dirt and dinosaur and great wooly mammoth carcasses it plowed up as it came south. We named it Long Island.

For some reason, the junk that formed Long Island arranged itself on the eastern end as a fishes tail. We call them the North and South Forks. Riddled with bays and inlets and ponds, lakes and harbors, these geological accidents are among the things that make the Gardiner's Island so attractive to us today. But the glacier also left numerous islands of boulders and mud and other crap near the fish tails. All together, there are five of them. What follows is a brief history of each since the coming of man. Their development has been extraordinarily varied.

GARDINER'S ISLAND, about 8,000 acres, is the second largest of the five islands. A favorite of the Native Americans, it was the first piece of land sold to the white men, exchanging hands for a few baubles of coats and beads by Chief Wyandanch to the Gardiner family. This was in 1639. The island has since remained in the Gardiner family through seventeen generations and is the longest continuously owned private island in the United States. It has an extraordinary history.

Around 1699, the pirate Captain Kidd buried treasure on the island. But after he was caught and hung it was dug up.

Seventeen Gardiners have been lord of the manor. As lord of the manor he had total governmental control of the farmers who worked there. According wife have surely tried. About ten years ago, Gardiner looked in a telephone book and found a distant cousin with the same name who lived and worked as an attorney in Arkansas. He called him up and offered to adopt him, an offer that was considered for about a year since it would have made this man and his family very rich, but in the end rejected. The man didn't want to uproot his lifestyle. Since then, Robert Gardiner has actively sought to have the state take over the island to preserve it.

Also about ten years ago, a rival claim to the island was made by a niece of Gardiner who had married a man named Golet. That claim has been pursued vigorously, and the Goelets have hedged their bets about giving up the zoning that could carve the island up into five acre lots.

Nevertheless, or perhaps because of that, the State is proceeding with plans, abetted by a recently passed Town Real Estate Transfer tax that is bringing in about $9 million a year, to buy and preserve the place.

TOTTEN ISLAND, about fifty acres, off the coast of the North Fork, is the smallest of the five islands. A stone fort was built on it to act as a military post during the War of 1812. This fort was periodically abandoned, the last time after World War I. During World War II, the fort was declared uninhabitable, to legend, there was once a murder on the island and the then current lord of the manner ordered the murderer hung.

A manor house was built on the island, along with several farm buildings, a dock, a dirt airstrip and a beautiful wooden windmill. That, however, is all. The rest of Gardiner's Island is still in its pristine state, with all its original flora and fauna. No new exotic trees imported from Japan here. It is, environmentally, a gem.

It's most recent Lord, Robert David Lion Gardiner, is now 89 years old and has no heirs. He and his was declared off limits to the general public, and was used for target practice by the Army Air Force. With the fort reduced to rubble and most of it underwater, it became a good place to catch fish for the sports fishermen, though everyone was under strict orders to not climb around on the fort lest something old explodes.

SHELTER ISLAND, about 15,000 acres, is the largest of the islands, wedged in between the two forks so tightly that the water passage to get around the island by passing between the forks and the island on the north and south are at some points only a quarter mile wide.

A Native American tribe sold Shelter Island to the white men not long after Wyandanch sold Gardiner's Island.

But Shelter Island developed in a very different way. Big enough and close enough to the two forks — ferries can get you to the island in just five minutes — it first developed a commercial fishing industry along with some commercial farming — and then later, when paddle wheel steam boats were all the rage in the 1800s, as an exclusive resort for the wealthy of Manhattan. On Friday nights, families would assemble down at the docks to greet the “daddy boats” bringing the fathers, the heads of the household, out for the weekend from Wall Street. There were enthusiastic welcomes for these men — pork pie hats were in fashion and the women carried parasols, all duly recorded on glass plate photographs taken at the time — and then sorrowful partings on Sunday nights.

Most of the beautiful old gingerbread Victorian houses on the island built for this enterprise remain today, almost all of them brilliantly and exuberantly restored. And Shelter Island remains an enclave for wealthy New Yorkers with the wherewithall to go there in the summertime. The rest of the year is a long, long winter. Although beginning eight years ago, rock star Billy Joel opened a boat building operation at a marina in Coecles Harbor.

PLUM ISLAND, about 800 acres, is off the coast of Orient Point and until the late 1940s was uninhabited except for a few families who lived and ran dirt farms there. There were also a few deer, osprey and other local creatures. In 1948, the farmers were bought out by the Federal Government who decided it was a perfect spot to do medical research on animal diseases. From that day until this, it has been closed to the public, with about 400 employees departing every morning for the Plum Island Animal Disease Center by ferry boat from docks at Orient.

What goes on there? Who knows. But there was an occasion, in the 1950s, when some infected deer swam from the island to the mainland and touched off an epidemic of hoof and mouth disease that decimated much of the livestock of the North Fork.

Six months ago, the new director of the place proposed “upgrading” Plum Island so it can study not only animal diseases but also human diseases. He is talking about diseases that are triggered by biological warfare, or other materials used by terrorists.

In 1948, Plum Island was in an unpopulated area. Now both the North and South Forks are teeming with people, some of whom are the leaders in their various fields. Doesn't sound like a very good idea, bringing lethal bacteria to a populated area.

Nevertheless, the new director has launched a public relations campaign and if given clearance you can go to Plum Island, take off your clothes in the locker room, go through the bio detox shower, don white lab suits and slippers, and have a look for yourself.

ROBINS ISLAND is the next to smallest of the islands, occupying about 400 acres inside Peconic Bay. Measuring a mile by half a mile, it is, at its nearest point, more than a mile from the mainland. It also, because of its shape, lacks a proper harbor. All in all, a difficult proposition for any development, though with its woods and clearings, a lovely spot for local flora and fauna.

Nevertheless, at times, various developments have been proposed for the island, usually as a kind of blackmail to get the price up. The next owner might try a little mining operation. Or turn it into a private compound.

At the present time, the island is the exclusive property of Louis Bacon, a Wall Street millionaire with a penchant for privacy who has built a small manor house on the island and has taken measures to preserve the animals and plantlife there, an effort applauded by many environmental groups.

Bacon takes friends and family to the island for hunting trips and a little roughing it. He has also bought some property along the beach on the south shore, which people say is because he wants to keep it from being developed so as to preserve his view.

Two other pieces of land, each about 400 acres, might be considered islands, except for the fact that causeways have been built in recent years across a span of a few hundred yards to make them into peninsulas. Thus they have developed as mainland areas, with farming, fishing, and summerpeople second homes in abundance.

These two parcels are worth mentioning, but for different reasons.

This Old Internet

Instant Messaging, Ham Radio, Morse Code And "All The Ships At Sea"

By Dan Rattiner

There are many similarities between my Uncle Lou, who died in 1965, and my teenagers. My teenagers – Cathie's and mine – spend much of their waking hours after school in their rooms here in East Hampton facing their computers, talking to one another. They do this by typing something on a keyboard after which the words appear in a box, then pressing a button, thereby sending these words to one of their comrades. They talk this way back and forth to their friends down the street, to their buddies in Arizona they lifeguarded with this summer at the Devon Yacht Club, and to the other teenagers in the bedrooms next door.

My Uncle Lou, who I knew when I was a little boy, did the same thing. He was a fully grown man then, but he had a disability and when you had a disability back then you stayed at home with your parents and hung around and helped out, in exchange for which you got the love of your mom and dad, food on the table and a place to sleep.

Uncle Lou, like my teenagers, also spent most of his time in his room. On one side was the bed and a night table. On the other, extending floor to ceiling almost the entire length of the wall, was this incredible array of electronic equipment that he could use to reach out to all his friends wherever they might be. The equipment had vacuum tubes and coils and dials. The dials glowed at night, and the vacuum tubes threw off enough heat to keep the room warm even on the coldest day of winter. There was also, when you turned the thing on, a humming sound coming from a loud speaker high up along the wall. Uncle in his room with him, the smells of dinner on the stove wafting in from the kitchen. Uncle Lou talked with people around the world.

"Hello, this is W2PYX, W2PYX, Pretty Young Xrays, come in. Over."

Someone in a far away crackly voice would respond. And Uncle Lou would look up their call letters and inform me they were sitting at a rig just like his talking into a microphone in Lisbon, the Capitol of the Azores.

My teenagers all have different screen names. One of them is BUTTCOW26. It gives anonymity to them when they are talking. Though sometimes one of them can use the screen name of another to play tricks on who they are talking to.

Uncle Lou didn't have a screen name, but he had a "handle," which was Pretty Young Xrays. Today the internet is a free for all. No rules. No regulations. In Uncle Lou's time, everything was regulated. There were government rules set down. There were licences to apply for, tests to pass. Things were much more serious then. I guess.

My teenagers' rooms, besides their computers, are adorned with rap star posters, television sets that are always on but with the volume off, and tables upon which are empty pizza boxes and cans of Coke.

"Hello, this is W2PYX, W2PYX, Pretty Young Xrays, come in. Over." Someone in a far away crackly voice would respond.

Lou did not have a keyboard. Instead, he would sit there and talk into a big old fashioned microphone and you could hear it, softly, on the loud speaker. The people he was talking to waited until he was done — he'd say "Over" — and they would speak back to him and that would come out the loud speaker too. Uncle Lou had friends all over the world. What he was using to reach them, he said, was something called a ham radio set. He referred to it as his rig. And he said he could talk to people for free. He explained he was using something called radio bandwidth.

I loved going to visit my Uncle Lou. I'd sit

Internet

Uncle Lou's room, besides this massive, glowing ham radio rig, had on the walls a map of the world and hundreds of pennants and cards that had been sent to him by some of his friends from around the world. Uncle Lou had no food or drink containers anywhere in his room. If he was hungry or thirsty, he went into the kitchen.

Uncle Lou had his own special lingo for his ham radio system just as my teenagers have their own special lingo for their computers and the internet. Uncle Lou's terms included YL, decibel, MUF, WAZ, chirp, zero beat and dB which only he and his mates really understood properly. My teenagers talk about CD Roms and Norton Utilities, floppies, MP3s and burners. Uncle Lou knew Morse Code. There were people with smaller rigs than his, much smaller, who only communicated by tapping out messages on a little electronic brass key with dots and dashes. Uncle Lou could understand them. And he could tap replies back.

"If a ship in the Atlantic were in trouble and I heard the S.O.S." Uncle Lou told me, "I could pass it along."

Sometimes, my teenagers come out of their rooms to play cards, or make a videotape out on the deck, or go sleigh riding, or go out with girlfriends. Some of them have their own cars.

Some of them don't and get rides.

Uncle Lou would come out of his room and get a lift in his parents' car somewhere for lunch at the Candy Kitchen or to watch the kids sleigh riding. Uncle Lou, because of his disability, couldn't do much himself.

I miss Uncle Lou. Al Gore says he invented the internet. But the internet was always out there, just by a different name. When Uncle Lou died, at 53, I remember going to his funeral and wondering whatever are they going to do with his ham radio rig. We went back to the house after the burial and there it was, gathering dust. A week later, it was gone.

The Krypton Theory

A Comic Book Superhero's Lesson And An Environmental Cleanup In Montauk

By Dan Rattiner

The State of New York is nearing the end of a $1.5 million environmental cleanup of an abandoned army base in Montauk. A few buildings on the base will be left standing as a memorial to the soldiers of World War II, while the rest of the site — which is oceanfront — will be administered as a public park.

The cleanup has been quite extensive. The Army abandoned the place leaving chemicals, asbestos, broken glass and construction debris on the property.

Those were the days when people believed you could leave just about anything around and if things got bad for the planet far into the future, we could find another planet nearby and just take rocket ships to it. This was the Krypton Theory.

Krypton, you may know, is the planet where Superman came from. It got spoiled and ruined — this was dreamt up in 1939 by the creator of the Superman comics — and in one last desperate act, the father and mother of Superman (Superman's dad being played by Marlon Brando in the 1979 movie) arrange to have this little superbaby fired off in a rocket ship to a big green planet they can see in their telescopes.

The launch is successful, and as this little baby is rocketed through space, behind him, the planet Krypton explodes, instantly killing everybody on into Superman. Come ON. The phone booths, even then, were made of glass all around. You mean to say that never in all these years did someone look in and say Hey, I have to make a phone call? What are you doing? Hey everybody, this guy is changing into a Superman suit!

And how did Clark Kent do it anyway? Ever try to change clothes in a phone booth? It's almost impossible. You can't bend over to take off your pants. Can you imagine some heavily muscled individual trying to take off his pants in a phone booth?

If Superman's secret has not been revealed to this day, it is interesting that it took thirty years for people in real life to figure out that the Krypton

And how did Clark Kent do it anyway? Ever try to change clothes in a phone booth? It's almost impossible. You can't bend over to take off your pants.

it. Superbaby is on his own and lands in a cornfield in Iowa. You know the rest.

Did you ever wonder how Superman, even to this day, fools everybody just by putting on his glasses? People look at Clark Kent and his glasses and they say — what is it that is different about you? Did you cut your hair? Shave your moustache?

Clark Kent goes into a phone booth and changes

Theory was baloney and we couldn't ruin the planet. Superman was created in 1939. The Army camp in Montauk was abandoned in 1948, with the Krypton Theory still in full flower. The environmental movement did not get underway until the late 1960s.

So now we have cleanups, and, hey everybody, Clark Kent is Superman!

Cutchogue on the North Fork, is one of these parcels. In 1939, Albert Einstein rented a summer house there. Widowed, he lived there alone, with occasional visits from his colleagues. As a hobby, during the day he sailed on Peconic Bay in a small one man cat boat. In the evening he participated in an amateur string quartet that played classical music in participants' homes.

In July that year, with the world on the brink of World War II, scientists from New York and Princeton drove out to visit him, urging him to write a letter to President Roosevelt to authorize the study of atomic energy with the goal of making an Atomic Bomb. Einstein wrote that letter, a very famous letter, and it was delivered to the President who did authorize the funds for what was known then as the Manhattan Project (based in Los Alamos, New Mexico). It was like the name would throw the Nazis off the scent.)

In 1945, after the war ended and the world could witness the devastating effects the bomb had on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Einstein wrote another letter urging the President NOT to continue to develop this weapon.

Finally, there is NORTH HAVEN, a 500 acre peninsula that juts out from Sag Harbor. A heavily wooded area, it has a population of just 600 people, including Jimmy Buffet, the singer, who has a house on the beach facing Shelter Island. Nevertheless, in spite of this small population, but largely because the deer population rose to an unbelievable 1,000 at one point, with the animals consuming all the landscaping and garbage of the human residents as they starved through difficult winters, the residents incorporated as a Village determined to take hold of this problem. They built a village hall, elected a mayor, elected a village board. And after great debate, they still have been unable to agree about what to do with the deer, whether to feed them or exterminate them or relocate them, although recently they have held a bow and arrow hunting season which has thinned the herd a little.

Stealth

The Navy Unveils A Destroyer That An Enemy Can't See But The Rest Of Us Can

By Dan Rattiner

The United States Navy unveiled its plans for a "Stealth" destroyer last week. I am not making this up. They made the initial announcement, without actually showing the plans, on Monday. Then on Wednesday, they held a press conference at which they displayed a side view drawing of it.

"This destroyer is completely invisible to an enemy," the press officer said. He handed out copies of the drawing, which were then published in all the newspapers on Thursday.

The destroyer looked completely visible to me, I thought, when I saw a copy of it in The New York Times. Then I thought — that makes sense.

I remember when the plans for the first stealth bomber came out and what it looked like was top secret. It took three years before any member of the press or the public got to see what the stealth bomber actually looked like and that was because they made the mistake of flying the experimental test version of it through the sky. People looked up. There it was. Some people took pictures of it.

The drawing of the stealth destroyer shows that it is not a very big ship. It's about the size of the Orient Point Ferry. If it were bigger, they would have called it the stealth cruiser. And if it were bigger still it would be the stealth battleship. That is the order of things in the navy. From smallest destroyer, given by the press officer, was a kind of apology about its cost and a sales pitch about its fine accommodations on board for the sailors. There would be no tiny bunks in rows belowdecks as there used to be in the old days. The sailors would have spacious cabins because the way they build a stealth destroyer, or bomber or whatever, is to have all the metal panels on the sides slant inward so radar waves coming from an enemy would bounce off the slant and instead of going back to the radar operator would go straight up in the air. Enemy radar operators would not see the stealth destroyer. Only God and the angels would see the stealth destroyer.

"Because all the panels have to be at a slant," the press officer said, "the top of the destroyer is very small, but it becomes very large as you go down. By the time you get to belowdecks, it is very spacious indeed."

You can see this from the drawing. It is pointy on the top. Very wide at the waterline. It bears a startling resemblance to the ironclad ship the to largest. Destroyer, cruiser, battleship.

...there are sailors... wearing special anti-radar coneheads like from Saturday Night Live, and so you can't see them.

Probably the reason they are building it just as a destroyer is because the price tag of it will be $3 billion. Each. This is a huge amount of money. And with estimates sometimes turning out to be only half of the final actual cost, there's no way they could build it as a cruiser or battleship.

In fact, much of the description of the stealth

Merrimac, which fought, and lost, a gun battle with the ironclad Monitor during the Civil War. Cannonballs, fired by the Monitor, were supposed to hit the Merrimac and bounce straight up. Didn't work.

You do notice that in the drawing there are no sailors topside. Apparently, they are all below, playing eighteen holes of golf. Actually, they are topside. But they are wearing special anti-radar coneheads like from Saturday Night Live, and so you can't see them.

As for the huge cost — this would be about twenty times the cost of a regular destroyer — the press officer said in the long run they'd save money.

"You only need half as much crew to operate a stealth destroyer as you would a regular destroyer," he said. "So in the long run, it's cheaper."

The reporters nodded. Yeah. Right.

The truth is that the stealth destroyer is very likely so expensive it will never get built. And it will join a long and growing list of next generation military hardware that is so sophisticated and so wonderful it is never going to get built. The next generation air force fighter plane, for example, the F-22, can't get its financial approvals. We're still flying F-14 carrier jets designed in the 1970s because the next generation carrier jets would have each cost ten times as much.

I foresee a day when proposed weapons will be so wonderful and sophisticated that we won't be able to build any of them. The current generation of weapons will have rusted and rotted away. And all our generals will be able to do is chase one another around with sticks.

"Our weapons would have been incredible if we could have afforded them," they will say to an enemy.

"Oh yeah? Our weapons would have been even more incredible," the enemy generals will say.

And they will all unroll their blueprints and sketches on the ground and whichever side has the better ones will be declared the winner. •

Personal Journey

Our Bridgehampton Reporter Visits Auschwitz/Birkenau Where Her Family Was Killed

By Joan Zandell

I knew the moment that the ticket to Poland arrived that I was going home. Not to a warm, cushy, endearing home, but to the one historical event that defined not only who my parents were, but who I was. If indeed my small life had risen from the ashes of the Holocaust like the phoenix, this would be my moment of truth, the moment in which entering my deepest and darkest fears, I would meet myself.

My father was born in Berlin, but from the age of six onward, lived in a small, Polish town called Kutno, the home of my paternal grandfather and his twelve siblings. The year that Hitler attacked Poland, my father was studying architecture at the University of Warsaw. It was there that he joined the underground. Simultaneously, Menachim Begin was studying at the same University, and even then, was a known Zionist. My father found his tactics as well as his position too extreme and chose to go his own way; he preferred to forge documents to smuggle Jews and other political "undesirables" out of Poland.

Within months, a member of his underground organization was apprehended and he gave the names of several members in exchange for his life. Overnight, my father became a fugitive. He was forced to flee Poland to a town where he could hide undetected. He escaped to a place then known as Czernovitz in Romania (today Russia) because its second language, and his first, was German. Determined to live there quietly designing and painting movie posters, he entered the Romanian artistic community where he remained undiscovered for several years before he and the rest of my family were arrested.

Known for its cultural as well as its café society, and despite the war, Czernovitz was alive. At a café one afternoon, he met and fell in love with my mother, a beautiful, burgeoning pianist who had just turned sixteen. Within weeks, they were married. She, her sister, her mother and my father lived together for the remainder of the war. False documents were created that saved their lives. After the war was over, they immigrated to America together.

Throughout this time, my father's parents remained in Kutno. They were faced with a decision – whether to remain living in the countryside, to stay with extended family in Warsaw, or join my father in Romania – they opted to join the other family members in Warsaw. After all, pogroms had happened in Poland before, and it was just a matter of time before people returned to their senses.

Days after their arrival in Warsaw, the Jews were rounded up and herded into a part of the city that became the Warsaw Ghetto. The Nazi plan was to alienate, isolate and starve people in the ghetto. Unable to get out or go in, unable to receive mail, ten people to a room in each apartment, privacy ended, typhoid fever reigned, no food or water or medications were to be had, and still, Jews were not dying quickly enough. Hitler was eager to move his plans for a Jew-free Europe forward. Impatient morning, they were loaded onto cattle cars in the first transport to the extermination camp known as Treblinka. They were never seen again.

It is more than likely that if they survived the trip, which could take as long as three days in a cattle car without windows, seats, toilets, water, or food, packed to standing room capacity, that by the time they arrived at their destination, exhausted, humiliated, covered in their own urine and feces, frightened, spiritually and physically weakened, that the real fireworks of the trip would begin.

They would be met on the platform by the official camp welcoming committee; SS Guards carrying guns in one hand and rabid German Shepherds in the other. Told to leave their valuables on the platform, those not moving quickly enough would be shot.

Next, families would be separated. Women and children to the right, men to the left. Then separately, they would be taken to changing rooms where they would be ordered to strip naked. Their heads and bodies would be shaved, their hair used for fabric and insulation for shoes and other clothing products.

If they were young enough and strong enough to work, they were tattooed with the numbers that would replace their names for the duration of their stay. If they were my grand parents age, meaning older than 40, they would be taken immediately in waiting trucks directly to the gas chambers for a nice, long shower after their arduous trip.

When water would fail to appear from the showerheads above them, the hundreds of naked individuals packed like sardines in a can, having realized that they had been betrayed, would scratch violently at the doors and scream as they unwillingly inhaled Zyklon-D deeply for twenty-minutes, after which period of time, they would be dead.

After the gold fillings were removed from their teeth, and their private parts searched for valuables such as jewels and gold, they were lifted into the ovens at the crematorium, to be burned, their ashes later used as fertilizer for the grounds of the camp. Their fellow prisoners, the ones responsible for searching the bodies, and then lifting them into the ovens, were promised that by doing such dirty work they would be rewarded with the gift of life. Little did they know, that after two months, they would be gassed and burned in exactly the same manner, precisely because they had seen too much and were now a danger to the security of the Third Reich.

With the exception of three of my father's cousins, the entire Polish side of the family, my grandfather and all his siblings, were exterminated at either to see his vision realized, the Final Solution went into full swing.

One morning, my grandfather saw a sign posted in the main square of the ghetto requesting volunteers for a work outfit. Those strong enough would be sent to a labor camp for the duration of the war. Living under the most unacceptable of circumstances, logic told him that this was an opportunity. He came from a farm community, he could be of use. He did precisely what the propaganda machine anticipated he would do. He signed on. My grandmother, unwilling to remain in the ghetto without him, signed on as well. The next

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Hymn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 141 VALENTINE'S DAY MEN - TWO DAY WARNING!

This edition comes out Friday, Feb 9th. You guys have 5 days to get your wallet and make her day. Remember what Shakespeare once said, "Hell hath no fury as a woman without a Valentine's Day gift." Men commonly forget Valentine's Day, I'm not sure why. We have a February about this time every year, and February 14th almost always comes after February 13th. You guys know it's coming, you know something romantic is mandatory. It's romance or the road for you... Fail to produce a gift and a sentimental card and you'll suffer the consequences till May at least.

The Shelter Island Pharmacy has our own Dennis Rafflelock's wonderful new jazz CD, that's a nice start. They always have a nice candy selection too, but that's just the tip of the bon-bon. You must find a gift that answers a woman's perpetual question, "How much do you love me and why isn't it more?" You are only as good as your last gift, remember that.

For nice jewelry, check out The King's Jewels and Fallen Angel Antiques. The King's Jewels has those Shelter Island-shaped necklaces, can't go wrong with that guys! Cornucopia has a little of everything. If she likes toys - don't laugh - toys are wonderful, go to Jack's Marina and go crazy! But don't wander into the hardware side of the store, a gallon of paint does not a gift make. There's nothing worse than when a man buys a woman a gift that's really for him. Nice try, but giving her a cordless drill so she doesn't have to ask you to fix things is not a gift! Bliss' has high quality practical gifts, you're allowed to get a practical gift, but only as a warm-up to the feature presentation which must be elegant and lovely. The Island Gallery here is fantastic if your hunny likes art. Men don't usually think of art as a gift, but a small pretty print combined with a bouquet will get you 'a lot of...appreciation. The way to a woman's heart is Art! I can't imagine any woman not loving anything done by Olive Reich. And if you buy an Olive Reich and your gal doesn't like it, I'll be happy to take it off your hands, it's a win-win gamble! (At some point in time I hope Dan's does an Olive Reich cover so everyone can see what I'm talking about. Considering much of the "art" I've seen on the Dan's covers, Olive is so far ahead in the race, she laps the field.) There's a new gift store in Greenport I highly recommend too. It's called Jubilee, around the corner from the Post Office. The owner, Jacqueline LaDuca, is extremely kind and helpful. Just tell her you're Valentine-challenged and she will save you from yourself. I go nuts every time I'm there, I must see fifty things I want every time I go in.

If you can swing it, a nice dinner is a good Valentine gift. Remember, any food we don't have to cook tastes great to us. So whether you take her out, or bring home HER favorite take-out, you'll be in good standing. But if you bring home take-out, make sure you do the clean-up otherwise it negates the effort of bringing home dinner. If you're a hunter, you can argue that killing a deer and hanging it up outside to drain technically counts as authentic "take-out" food. But it's not an optimal choice for Valentine's Day guys, not even if you put a bow on it, carve a heart in the hide and call it Valentine Venison.

Last week's Shelter Island Reporter reported a hunter barely missing two of our real dears, the kind and beautiful Betty Crowson and the pretty and talented Jennifer Corwin. The two friends were out for a walk when buckshot struck a tree barely twelve feet from Mrs. Crowson's head. Yikes!!! Perhaps a blazing orange jacket with matching hat with blinking red lights would make a good Valentine's Day gift...

Now if you take your gal out to a restaurant, you don't have to wear a tie, but a shower and clean clothes are a must. A clean T-shirt with a Budweiser logo does not count as clothing in this case. We know you can't get too polished up because one of your friends might see you and think you dressed up to impress your lady - we understand your ego limitations. Just a nice shirt with a collar and maybe... shoes instead of work boots and sneakers? Too much? Okay, clean sneakers will do.

Liquor. Like the song says, "candy is dandy but liquor is quicker." Go to Dandy's and ask Dawn the Hottie or Joann the Gorgeous for the Godiva Chocolate Liquor. Anything labeled Godiva will help your cause. Same with anything labeled Chanel or Tiffany's. Remember that women brag about what their man did for them, gave to them, took them to, brought home to them, had made for them, sacrificed for them and cut off their right arm to get for them. Boy Scouts should have a badge for gift-giving, it's much harder than starting a fire with a rock and a flint, and learning six different places to get Her a gift is more useful in life than learning six different ways to tie a knot. Gift-giving certainly qualifies as a survival skill for men.

Treblinka or Auschwitz. Going to Auschwitz was going to see them, as well as visiting with their murderers.

I wasn't just going to Auschwitz to familiarize myself with the facilities I'd seen numerous times in reel after reel of documentary footage, to then climb into my waiting limo, where drink in hand, I would be whisked off to a New Age Polish culinary palace nestled romantically in the surrounding hills outside Oswiecim.

I had chosen to participate in a five-day meditation retreat sponsored by the Peacemaker Organization located in San Francisco. One-hundred-forty people from all over the world, six of us from the Ocean Zendo in Sagaponack, would convene for the sole purpose of meditation and prayer, and the reading out loud of the names of the dead, on the very platform at Auschwitz/Birkenau where the selections had been made. I would be able to say Kaddish for the members of my family that had perished there along with all the others.

Spending five days at Auschwitz engaged in such activities seemed to me an inconceivable amount of time to be sitting in the energy of such unimaginable evil. My fear was that I would not be strong enough to bear it. So I went. If the trip were going to kill me, at least I'd die in good company.

The first two days, during which time every minute detail of Auschwitz and Birkenau are still fresh. There was an entire side of a room filled with human hair. Was that hair, that pale brown strand, genetically mine? The more I saw, the deeper and deeper I fell into my own private darkness. Restless ghosts surrounded me.

Following the others, I walked into the gas chamber and crematorium where my family had walked before me. Overwhelmed, unable to breathe, afraid that I would vomit, I ran out into the light, gasping for air, unable to swallow sufficient amounts to sustain me. I sank to my knees. I was fainting and I was grateful that I was alone. I told myself that I needed to get a hold of myself. Sitting on the ground outside of the crematorium, I wept uncontrollable, salty tears stinging my cheeks as they streamed down my face into the earth. The fissure in the iceberg had taken hold.

Later on that same afternoon, we went to Birkenau. Walking along the railroad tracks, following the train's path in our minds at the same time that our feet touched the railroad ties, to the place where the prisoners had been unloaded. After the morning revealed, were the most difficult to bear. I stood beside the execution wall where 20,000 political prisoners had been shot. I marveled at how clean the stones appeared. I looked through thick plate glass at what were once eyeglasses, shoes and suitcases, the imprints of the spirit that wore them at Auschwitz, just as you thought it could not get worse, there was Birkenau. An organized, logical, frighteningly efficient killing machine. Built to accommodate 200,000 prisoners at any time, with four gas chambers and crematoria, 100,000 human beings were gassed and burned in the last month of the war alone.

At Birkenau, the masculine Nazi mind had discovered specialization. Special barracks for women about to be exterminated, special barracks for children, those unruly pests of war, special barracks for women and children. And of course, the camp was divided down the middle by long corridors of electrified, barbed-wire fencing, separating the men from the women. In the event that some poor soul actually felt strong enough to have an uncontrollable urge to see his wife or girlfriend, if he could manage to get to the electrified fence, he'd be shot by one of the snipers situated in the guard houses stationed every five-hundred yards, on either side of the railroad tracks. It was impossible for the men and women to communicate, unless they were sent on an errand to the other side of the camp.

Needless to say, at first glance, Birkenau is a family oriented, user-friendly, heart-warming kind of place. All those big trains coming and going, always running on time. Reliability is so important in life. There were even drawings of children going off to school, hanging in the children's barracks. Such chillingly sarcastic touches, of which the camps and Nazi logic were filled, made my blood run cold.

As I walked from barracks to barracks, spending an inordinate amount of time where the children had been kept, I felt my father beside me. He tried to save as many children as he could during the war. I was filled with rage. How did my father find the strength to resist being a killer? To what source did he go to trust his humanity and integrity in the face of such terrible evil? From whom had he learned? He walked with me everywhere I went. And as the days wore on I discovered that I had newfound respect for him. Not only because he had unearthed a constructive way to resist, but because by simply being who he was, despite everything he had been through, he had given me the values that had brought me here, to this place now. As a result of being here in Poland, at Auschwitz/Birkenau, I had a greater understanding of what he had been up against, not only the staggering physical odds, but what he'd had to deal with on the moral and spiritual levels as well.

As the days wore on, we fell into a routine. Up at six o'clock, tea or coffee by six-thirty. Seven o'clock, group-council meetings to listen and share from the heart what we were feeling. Eight thirty, breakfast, by ten o'clock, we had either walked to Birkenau, or were taking the bus. By ten thirty we were sitting in a meditation circle on the railroad platform. Each meditation period, twenty-four people were scheduled to read the names of those who had died there. And after the meditation period, we would walk silently to one of the crematoria to say a prayer for the dead. During these periods every religion was represented.

We were Hasidic and Reformed Jews from Israel and America, Lutheran, Episcopalian and Catholic Christians from Germany, Poland, and the U.S., Unitarians, Muslims, and Hindus, Sufis from France, Italy, and Switzerland, Tibetan and Zen Buddhists from Holland and as far away as Tokyo, and a Native

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

Please excuse the silence of the last few weeks. Between traveling and some problems with my E-mail account and the way it has (or hasn't) worked from Mexico, communication has been a little difficult.

I've been staying with friends for the last two weeks. The youngest person in the household is a sixteen month old girl. Every morning she comes in to greet me. She wakes up happy and plays in bed for a while before making us get up. She usually sleeps till seven thirty or eight. She's very good at taking everything apart and fortunately she puts everything back after taking it out. There is a morning routine with her crayons. They all come out of their box and usually make it back in. Watching her is entertaining and a good learning experience. For me, it's been a joy. Her name is Lacey Nicole.

Lacey had the great good fortune of being born at exactly the right time. My friends had been looking to adopt a baby. They had a false start with another child and although it was a hardship at the time, the family took the child back after a week. The blessing is that when Lacey was born, they were called to the hospital and Lacey came home with them the next day. Now, almost a year and a half later the paperwork is through and they are waiting for her passport. This is the final step. No one can take Lacey away. She has devoted parents and we all have the joy of watching her learn.

Lacey is learning to talk. Even without an ample vocabulary, she manages to make her desires known. If I ask if she wants something I sometimes get an emphatic, "yes!" This morning I asked for a crayon from the floor. I was handed the crayon with the word, "here." Sometimes we think she can't understand. However, if we ask, "which is the red tomato?" or green, or yellow, she gets it right every time. Last night she turned on my computer. Within a year or two, Lacey will be running the household. She almost does now.

We've been to the beach, out to dinner, to brunch at a fancy hotel, out shopping, etc. Lacey comes along, eats with a fork and doesn't make problems. I would have thought it impossible but in fact this is a graceful young girl, full of life, and ready to tackle whatever challenge comes her way.

Thinking about this lucky girl reminds me of an event coming up. Gines Serran Pagan is hosting a fundraiser at the Red Barn Atelier in Southampton on Feb. 18th. The event will raise money for earthquake relief in El Salvador. There will be a silent auction. Look for more information in the local papers. I don't have all the details but I do know over one hundred artists have work for sale. I will participate from afar. Since it can be pretty quiet in the Hamptons in February, this is a great reason to come out of hibernation. Have fun, buy art and consider the children.

American LaKota Sundancer from North Dakota, who had been specially sent by his tribe. Each day, we could be seen walking to the platform, then silently sitting on our cushions in a meditation circle as the names of those who died were read. At times there was deathly silence, other times there was the sound of dogs barking and train whistles howling by, and some days beneath the sound of the wind rustling the last delicate leaves on the trees, you could hear the sound of weeping.

By the third day, something remarkable started to happen. The hearts of the individuals who were participating in this ritual started to open, and out rushed love and compassion in huge quantities. It was so welcome, so nourishing. It was undeniable. There had been a shift in energy.

Some of the German people present had shared with the group that they had discovered that their parents or grandparents had been Nazis. Some had been former-Neo Nazis themselves. Whatever had brought them to this point in their lives, they opened their souls and found the courage to witness the events that happened fifty-five years earlier.

No one questions that subsequent generations are not, nor have they ever been, responsible for what previous generations have done. But they bear that burden, and continue to be judged by history and the world. On this trip, the courageous among them were willing to shoulder and examine that burden, ours as well as theirs, and in some instances, share some of their pain with us.

I saw this retreat as an opportunity to look inside myself and to examine where I harbor prejudices: anti-Semitic feelings (yes, I am Jewish), anti-German feelings, anti-Arab, or anti- feelings? I had the opportunity to see that fear and self-loathing, in all its many disguises, projects itself generously upon anyone we perceive as "other." Whereas love, our life force, is reserved, stored and hoarded for the few deserving individuals we feel are most like us.

Auschwitz today

I have come away seeing the Holocaust as not solely a Jewish issue, but as a human issue in which every human being on the planet was affected. How many times have I been the one who looked away, the one who remained indifferent? I've often wondered how many Jews would have risked their lives and the lives of their families to hide a Christian or a Buddhist, had the shoe been on the other foot? At Auschwitz it was the Jews, along with 400,000 Polish political undesirables, several hundred thousand gypsies, homosexuals and the handicapped who were destroyed. What the perpetrators failed to take into account was that their actions would have long-term ramifications reverberating far into man's collective psyche.

By the end of the retreat, I could say with great sincerity that I went home with a renewed sense of purpose and hope. In my efforts to reach out to the other, my understanding was enlarged, my sensitivity stretched. I acknowledge that we are different. And that we are the same. We want many of the same things, and share many of the same dreams and aspirations for our children and ourselves. Ideally, if we learn how to celebrate those differences, in addition to the similarities, individually and collectively, we can start to heal the wounds we carry rather than projecting them onto others and perpetuating a cycle of hate that needs to end. Imagine if we truly opened our hearts to love, rather than close them down in fear, what a remarkable world this would be.

"SNACKS OVER MANHATTAN" AT THE BLUE HERON

Patrick Christiano, Curator of the Blue Heron Art Center, hosted a reception for well known artist, Kevin Berlin. His series Snacks Over Manhattan is now on exhibit at The Center until the end of February. The Blue Heron was active in Guild Hall's Play Reading Series this past summer, and Ghail Rhodes Benjamin, who performed in "We Are Your Sisters" at Guild Hall, said: "The exhibit is a must see". Feelbetter On Valentine's Day

In my travels, I am always looking for something new, thrilling and exciting in shopping. I found an interesting shop offering wellness-based gifts in Hampton Bays.

Feelbetter, a specialty all-occasion gift company, has opened for business on 91 Red Creek Road, Hampton Bays. The company offers Feelbetter boxes, a unique combination of natural supplements, herbals, personal care products and user friendly information assembled to address life, a life event, special occasion, illness, or simply to wish someone well.

The company was founded by Gregory Anne Cox, one of the first women graduates of the Culinary Institute of America who served as a chef in some of New York's best-known restaurants including Montrachet, La Cote Basque, and Sam's Midtown. Starting a decade ago Gregory turned her attention to food's role in health and wellness that lead to the study of nutrition, herbs and supplements.

"For years people have been asking me what to do to increase energy or get over one thing or another. Eventually I started putting together products with detailed information. I realized it as a business when the head of a major investment fund said he was looking for something different to send to 100 of his best clients." Said Cox, "I customized the 'New You for the New Year' box to suit certain of his clients. The boxes were a hit—finally something unique, practical and fun to both give and receive."

Feelbetter gifts deliver both proven remedies and little luxuries but the key difference is the education element. Each kit contains sound science in the form of user-friendly information about the products in each kit, their use and what to expect from them. It is science with insight and humor.

There are also Feelbetter Add-ons, items such as throw blankets, a good read, scented candle, an additional supplement, in short something to personalize the gift for the recipient.

Guilt Free Valentine's Day Chocolate Indulgent – For Valentine's Day the company introduces Feelbetter About Chocolate. Like so many things edible and pleasurable, the health and fat police have long frowned upon this lovable food of the gods. New research shows that although chocolate may be a high fat food, it also has much to recommend it from a health perspective. From antioxidant properties to mood elevating hormones, chocolate can be included in a healthy eating plan. Feel Better About Chocolate contains a tin of Max Brenner white chocolate "addiction" disks, Serendipity's "Frozen Hot Chocolate Bubble Bath," and a cutting edge report on chocolate's benefits and why it has been referred to as the "love bug."

Feelbetter About Chocolate Boxes:

"Chocolate Two Ways" $19.95 – Chocolate Two Ways Chocolate has a new lease on life. From feel-good hormones to antioxidants this good to eat stuff is really good for you. This gift includes a tin of white chocolate "Addictions" by Max Brenner and Frrozen Hot Chocolate bubble bath from Serendipity in-New York City.

"Light A Fire" $75.00 – This includes "The Kiss" a creamy oval shaped chocolate that comes with directions for full enjoyment, a tin of white chocolate "addictions", praline coated almonds robed in milk chocolate, Frrozen Hot Chocolate bubble bath, a rose scented sachet in silk voile and a rose colored timber candle.

"Chocolate Fun" $29.95 – From Serendipity in New York City comes an ice cream parlor in a box. Two packets of their famous Frrozen Hot Chocolate, a large sundae glass to drink from, two spoons and two straws. This blender drink is a New York classic and if you doubt something cold can taste just like the hot stuff we drank as kids, you'll have to try it. Comes with their Frrozen Hot Chocolate bubble bath.

"Nothing But Chocolate" $39.95 – Max Brenner chocolates are of the highest quality cocoa and pack a wallop of cocoa butter. Includes white chocolate "Addictions," a tablet of milk chocolate with cinnamon, a tin of Chicago-milk or dark chocolate thins with crunchy cocoa bits and praline coated almonds robed in milk chocolate.

Additional chocolate and Feelbetter boxes are individually packaged. Wolfier Vineyards wines available to compliment your chocolates. Boxes can be shipped the same day if you order by 2 p.m. To receive a complete list of Feelbetter boxes, call 631-728-1421.

Ciao and enjoy your healthy Valentine's Day!

Getting Crafty with Babs

Valentine's Day is a day to show our friends and family that we love and care for them. I like to make something that comes from the true heart and creative soul. This craft is very easy and is perfect for crafters of all ages.

VALENTINE COOKIE POT

With lollipops sugar cookies

Materials:

- 1 6" terracotta pot and dish
- 2 colors of 2 fl. oz. craft paint (I used red & Deco Art Metallics champagne)
- Acrylic primer
- Paint brushes
- Safe-release masking tape 1 in. (for stripes)
- White Deco color paint marker
- Clear acrylic sealer gloss
- 1 square Styrofoam (to fit into pot)
- Valentine / heart cookie cutters
- Long lollipop sticks or skewers
- Sugar cookie mix or your favorite recipe
- 1 bag of "candy conversation hearts"

1. Take the terra-cotta pot and apply one coat of acrylic primer. Let dry completely about 10-15 minutes

2. Paint the entire pot and dish with one color. (I mixed the red with Metallics champagne, to make a beautiful shimmering pink.) Let dry completely about

10-15 minutes

3. To make stripes as I have done, use the safe-release masking tape. Start tape under the lip of the pot and extend vertically to the hole on the bottom. Apply next piece of tape approx. 1" away from first piece and continue around. (Note: you must use this tape; regular masking tape will take paint off.)

4. Paint the stripe area not taped with other color (I used red). Let dry completely, about 10-15 minutes. Peel tape off gently.

5. Spray pot and dish with clear acrylic sealer gloss in well ventilated area. I suggest doing this outside. Spray in quick, short mists over entire piece. Apply two coats. Let dry 15 minutes between coats.

6. Use White Deco color paint marker to accent pot. Be creative. Outline the stripes. Draw hearts. I have written love and I love you, in different languages, around the top of the pot. I love you in French is "Je t'aime," in Spanish, "Te quiero," and in Italian, "Ti amo."

Feel free to use your creativity and paint the pot with your own design. I had fun coming up with different designs.

7. When you have finished painting the pot and dish, it's time to bake the Valentine sugar cookie lollipops.

I went the easy route and used Betty Crocker Sugar Cookie Mix. Cut out the cookies with Valentine cookie cutters and put a stick in the cookies before cooking to make Valentine Cookie lollypops. An alternative to this is to make chocolate lollipops

8. Once cookies are baked and cooled, push sticks into Styrofoam.

9. Cover Styrofoam with conversation hearts.

10. Give to a friend, family member or sweetheart; it will surely make them smile. Don't know where to purchase craft supplies?

I find, around this time of year, it is not so easy to find real terra-cotta pots. I found plenty at the Emporium True Value, in Sag Harbor, along with safe-release masking tape and paint brushes. The rest of the craft items I found at the Sag Harbor Variety Store.

East End Romance: Give Your Valentine Something Different

Flowers and chocolate again? Chances are, if you are considering a gift for someone special on February 14, you either know them well or would like to know them better. Instead of the usual cliches this year, why not present your sweetheart with a more original, more personal gift that will be truly memorable? Flowers wilt and chocolates add pounds. If you are fortunate enough to be out here this Wednesday, here are some ideas to create memories that will last long after February has turned into June.

A Valentine for the Adventurous

One day is not enough time for an African safari, so here's the next best thing.

Years ago, when my husband David and I lived on his family's farm in Wainscott, David surprised me one dreary, winter morning. "Put on your jacket," he said. "Let's go for a ride." Little did I know what he meant by "ride." A few minutes later, we were at the East Hampton Airport, seated in a Cessna 172, ready for takeoff. I was so stunned that I forgot to be nervous! We were up in the air for about an hour, flying over our house and out over the ocean. This surprise was so spontaneous that I will never forget the excitement of that day.

How to for Valentine's Day: Call Sound Aircraft Services in Wainscott at the East Hampton Airport. Do this in advance as appointments are necessary and maybe subject to weather conditions. The minimum flight time is one hour; this is the amount of time we spent aloft and it was perfect. At a cost of $134 plus tax/hour, these sightseeing trips are a relative bargain compared to the cost of dinner for two at an upscale restaurant in the Hamptons on holidays. For added sensation, ask your pilot to fly over Montauk Point during your excursion. Bring along your favorite Champagne or French sparkling cider (these must be uncorked before entering the plane!) and plastic glasses for an airborne toast. And, by all means, don't forget your camera. The pilot will even take a photo of the two of you standing by the plane either before or after your flight! Contact Sound Aircraft at 537-2202 for more information and reservations.

A Valentine for the Nature Lover

Does your sweetheart love the great outdoors? Surprise him/her with a trip to the Morton Wildlife Preserve in Sag Harbor/Noyac. Wrap a little bundle of birdseed (sunflower seeds work best) in cloth (a handkerchief would be perfect) and tie it up with a red ribbon. Cut out a heart from red paper and write a cute note, such as "Valentine's Day is for the birds!," present your sweetheart with the gift and then head over to the preserve. There will be hardly anyone there during the week and, if neither you nor your Valentine have ever been there, this little sanctuary is a real treat.

When you arrive, empty some of the birdseed into the palms of your hands and, before you know it, a black-capped chickadee will be landing on your hand to pluck a seed and fly off to a branch to break it open. The preserve's trail is about a mile long and there is an additional trail you can follow out to the beach. Go at dusk and plan to go out for a romantic dinner afterward; this will be a Valentine's Day you won't soon forget!

A Valentine for the Intellectual

Is your idea of the perfect Valentine's Day a little more intellectually stimulating? For lovers of romance and poetry, it would be hard to beat an evening spent listening to poet Siv Cedering read from her "original long poems" at the Duke Lecture Hall on the Southampton College Campus at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Born in Sweden, Siv Cedering immigrated to San Francisco at the age of fourteen and has since written eighteen books of poetry and fiction. "Usually written in the first person, Cedering's poems often deal with the erotic and the sensuous realm," according to Darren Johnson at Southampton LIU. A perfect match for this most romantic of days! There is no charge for this event and there is a reception following the reading. Plan an early dinner, surprise your sweetheart with a volume of Cedering's poems and then head over to the college for a perfectly romantic Valentine's Day.

A Valentine for the Film Buff

If you feel that Valentine's Day just wouldn't be Valentine's Day without chocolate, head over to either the East Hampton or Greenport Cinema to see the romance sensation of the month: Chocolat. Set in a tranquil French town in the winter of 1959, Vianne (played by the beautiful Juliette Binoche) opens a chocolate shop and, through her magical ability to perceive her customers' desires, coaxes them to abandon themselves to temptation and happiness. But it is not until a handsome stranger, Roux (played by Johnny Depp), arrives in town that she is able to recognize her own desires. Despite Vianne's and Roux's happiness, not everyone is thrilled with Vianne's shop, especially Reynaud (Alfred Molina), a resident nobleman who believes strongly in tradition and is suspicious about Vianne's powers. In the end, love conquers all. And isn't that what romance is all about?

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Let it snow, let it snow, let it snow! Let us shop, let us shop, and let us shop!

Last year she went to China and this year she is going to Vietnam so that she could bring you her sixth annual "Nancy Is Out Of Town Sale" at all locations. Nancy & Co., Jobs Lane, Newtown Lane and Madison Avenue in New York City are all having this special sale on all of your favorite clothing that is drastically reduced to 30% to 80% off. Shhhhhh.... Keep this secret to yourself! Call 324-6097 or 283-0215 for information about this incredible sale.

Nearby, Biba Southampton on Jobs Lane will be opening her doors Saturdays and Sundays for their gigantic sale. All merchandise is 60% to 70% off; this is one sale you shouldn't miss. For all your little Valentines there are really good deals here. Call information call the East Hampton location at 324-2300.

With Valentine's Day only a few days away, at the Double Rainbow, Citarella Plaza in Water Mill, you will find great gift giving items and merchandise. Home of the largest selection of Godiva in the Hamptons, you will find custom made gift baskets, novelty chocolates, greeting cards and wrapping paper. There is a unique selection of toys featuring classic pedal cars, legos, Thomas the train, Brio, Gund and much more. The owners Grace and Bruce will personally handle any of your requests, with love. Call Double Rainbow at 726-2582.

Cynthia Rowley on Main Street in East Hampton is introducing (and proud of it) their resort and pre-spring arrivals. They have just received their new sunglasses and watch line as well. All of Cynthia Rowley's fall and winter merchandise is 50% to 70% off. Look for great buys on fabulous leather jackets, pants and leather dresses for a cool 40% off. Check out their hot and cool plaid collection as well. Spring is right around the corner and so are the spring arrivals of merchandise.

Swinging over to Sag Harbor I stopped at the Headley Studio on Madison Street, at Sage Street, where they are taking 50% off all hand-made teak and bamboo furniture in the entire store. Steve the owner is currently in Bali getting his spring and summer collection of tables together. His assistant Debbie is handling everything and will be glad to answer any questions that you might have. Steve is also working on their new plus size line of dresses which will be available March 5, along with new and exciting designs and fabrics. Stop in and see for yourself. You won't be sorry.

At the Whalebone Store on Noyac Road you will find great Valentine's gifts and cards. Look for fresh cut flowers, plants, photo frames, and much, much more. Love this store!

Have you gotten your Valentine's Day Linzer heart cookies, heart cakes and special candies yet? I have! I have already placed my Valentine's Day order at Tate's Bake Shop on North Sea Road for my sweeties Krista, Marisa, Alysa and Chelsea. There are some great gift packages here and all gifts include shipping and handling via UPS Ground. Go for it!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Valentine's Day shopping!

Chocolates And Diamonds

Celebrating seventy-five years of romance, Godiva unveils the first seasonal collection of its 75th and, appropriately, "diamond" anniversary year. Aptly named "Exquisite Romance," Godiva's new 2001 Valentine's Day collection combines the elegance and sheer luxury of fine diamonds with the classic icons of romance.

Consumers once again have the chance to win the ultimate symbol of romance – by purchasing boxes that are part of Godiva's fifth annual "Chocolates & Diamonds" Valentine's Day promotion. With one spectacular 7.5 carat grand prize diamond ring as well as seventy-five first prize diamond line bracelets, it's easy for romantics to join in the celebration of Godiva's diamond anniversary.

Valentines can choose from treasures to give to loved ones (all of which are eligible for "Chocolates & Diamonds" and may have a winning certificate for diamonds nestled inside).

- Valentine Ballotin – Godiva's classic gold ballotin is romantically attired in a red ribbon with gold trim, topped with a delicate white floral bouquet.

- Red Paper Heart – This timeless icon of romance is more elegant than ever with a flowing red swirl pattern and a band of gold around the outer edge of this box of assorted milk, dark and ivory chocolates.

- Romantic Heart – A seasonal favorite, this luxurious heart-shaped keepsake box is all dressed up with a sensual red swirl pattern, gold cording and an ornate Godiva plaque on its side. Under the lid are assorted truffles and chocolates in milk, dark and ivory.

- Twelve Piece Valentine Box – This stylish gift box with a red swirl pattern and white ribbon with gold trim is filled with a decadent assortment of truffles and chocolates in milk, dark and ivory.

The "Exquisite Romance" collection is the perfect gift for those special loves in your life and are available in finer department stores and specialty shoppes nationwide.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

THE ART SCENE: FAR FROM THE HAMPTONS

YUCATAN, MEXICO - HAVANA, CUBA

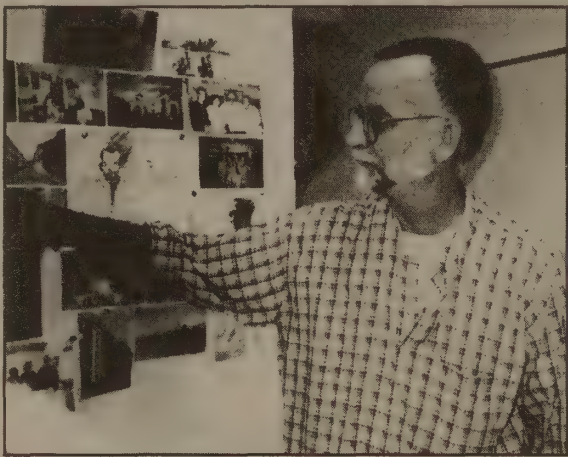

If the old and new converge in Southeast England, there are similar artistic phenomena present in both Mexico and Cuba, two developing nations where such dynamics are disconcerting at best. Yucatan's Isla Mujeres and Playa del Carmen as well as Havana, Cuba, are showing signs of losing their indigenous character, but for different reasons.

While Isla Mujeres (a tiny Caribbean island settled in the 1500s) maintains its traditional Mayan demeanor, contemporary commercialism accounts for the rapid changes. For years, there were no galleries or even many artists in the area. (We were only able to find one during the last ten years, a papier-mache artist.) Recently, things picked up when a new gallery opened at the exquisite bed-and-breakfast, House of Dreams—a place which has its own impressive, yet subtle paintings and architectural design elements. (Coincidentally, Sag Harbor's Hector de Cordova has shown at the gallery.) A silversmith from Mexico City is working in one of the new shopping squares as well.

Aesthetic nods to both contemporary and Yucatan influences are also apparent: a nearly completed thatched-roofed plaza which resembles the characteristic palapa; a jungle-like courtyard added to our favorite hotel, the Neo-Colonial Francis Arlene.

Playa del Carmen, evolving from a quiet fishing village into a thriving seaside resort, is also driven by commercialism. Fine art is scarce, although we did find one local artist, Alessandro Aronica, whose abstractions decorate the Yucatan-influenced Kinbe Hotel. The most interesting (and cutting edge) art, however, is found at the lovely Mosquito Blue Hotel. Recently, the revolving exhibition featured works by an Italian artist, Maja Brauni, whose colorful relief pieces of male/female torsos were quite arresting. A trip to nearby Xcaret, an ecological theme park, revealed its own brand of installation and interactive art in a natural Yucatan setting: extraordinary orchids growing in a hothouse; underground aquariums filled with fascinating tropical fish.

Nelson Herrera Ysla

Havana, Cuba, has seen extraordinary changes, too, but not necessarily from commercialism (although tourism is a big income source). Neglect and poverty have brought unwanted alterations to the once-stunning Spanish architecture. Even so, the performing arts, like the opera Cavallaria Rusticana that we saw at the National Theatre, are still top-notch. (The opera features an aria which is the theme song for Martin Scorsese's Raging Bull.)

Yet the visual arts thrive in Havana, largely due to the efforts of the Centro de Arte Contemporaneo Wifredo Lam, which administers the Cuban Bial. While its director, Nelson Herrera Ysla, made clear that the Cuban Bial celebrates the visual arts from Cuba as well as other developing nations, his Cuban selection committee's primary goal is promoting causes, trends and the kind of hybrid culture which exists throughout the world. According to Mr. Ysla, "Art is a way to identify and define the main essence of an idea. Art is a vehicle for observing social behavior. Artists are always pointing at a situation; it's very difficult to find peace and calm in the Third World. Artists show daily life, suffering in every neighborhood."

A discussion with Mr. Ysla reinforced a true but ironic fact: poor countries often contribute some of the world's best art. Conversely, a thriving economy doesn't necessarily yield a thriving culture. Visits to two Havana galleries proved the point: excellent, provocative, cutting edge art at both Galerie Habana and Galeria La Acacia (where the realistic, feminist themes by Sheyla Castellanos recall Joan Semmel's art).

A visit to the apartment (and now a private restaurant) where the well-known Cuban film, Strawberry and Chocolate, was filmed brought home other salient points. First, that The Hamptons are everywhere. (A photograph of Montauk resident/artist Julian Schnabel was on the wall.) And secondly, that art is sometimes most extraordinary when it's part of an ordinary setting. The memorabilia, artifacts, and collages on the walls formed a truly surreal installation where hybrid cultural influences, imagination and freedom reigned. Those very same factors were also Strawberry and Chocolate's theme, an homage to Cuban artistic liberation with obvious political implications.

Of course, changes are inevitable; some good and some not-so-good. Whatever the results, there are truths to be learned, art to be savored.

HONORING THE ARTIST: BETH RUNDQUIST

Like many individuals who reside here, painter Beth Rundquist is living in temporary quarters having vacated her last place at the end of summer. Unlike a lot of people, however, the situation is not driving her crazy. Then again, Ms. Rundquist is not like most people.

A meeting with Ms. Rundquist at a neighborhood coffee shop finds her cheery, collected and eager to talk about her life and art — despite the cold morning air outside. It's obvious she's changed her attitude about those "little things in life," like not having a permanent place to live and having to store almost all your earthly belongings.

Ms. Rundquist says she can "Let things go," although she wasn't only talking about stressful times and possessions. Perhaps it's her practice of Yoga that accounts for her calm attitude. Or perhaps it's because she's used to moving from place - to - place.

First there was undergraduate college at Smith in Massachusetts, where she majored in fashion. Then there was Maine where she lived for six years in her parent's home. Then there was Connecticut for a few years, New York and finally, the East End where she's been for the last three years.

Ms. Rundquist doesn't seem the worse for wear; she seems to thrive on her various experiences living in diverse places. Her stays in Europe seem as positive. "I spent a year in Paris when I was in college," she explains. "As one of the few Americans in my art classes, the French students were always remarking, 'Oh, you're so American in your style.' It didn't bother me. What they meant was I was very traditional in my style."

Another recent trip to Tuscany also reinforced her love of being in diverse places. "I went with six people, and we stayed in a villa. It was easy to paint there because I had time to do so; we were in the middle of no place."

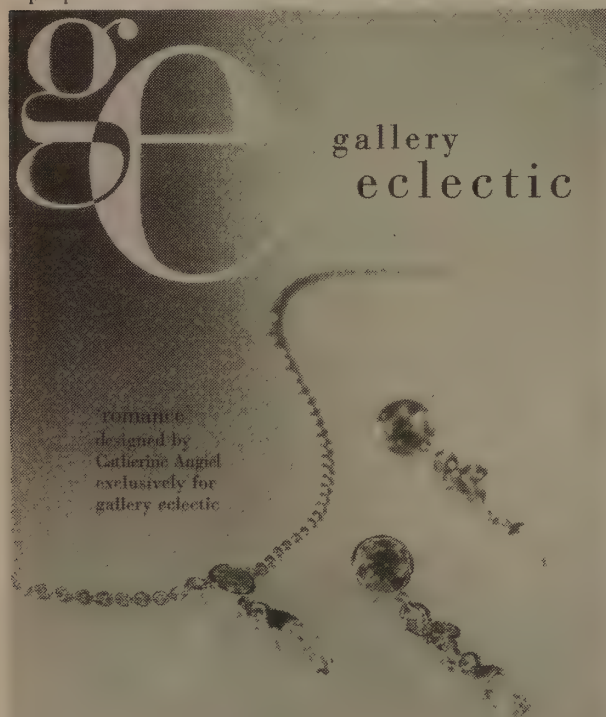

We can see how living in different places has influenced Ms. Rundquist's work — from this week's cover of clouds inspired by Maine to still lifes of luscious fruit perhaps influenced by a country environment. There are other inspirations as well. "Yoga has given me focus, discipline, confidence," she says with conviction. "Painting is like meditation. When you're painting, there's a timelessness present. Studying fashion perhaps first made me notice design. And, how the light here bounces off the ocean is also an inspiration."

Looking at Ms. Rundquist's work in her studio conjures up an observation. While she paints various subjects, like people and still lifes, there are stylistic similarities:

a flowing manner that is still representational (although it's not objective realism). It is this training that gives credence to her major influences: art training in traditional approaches plus her more relaxed way of looking at life — discipline and ease existing simultaneously.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Rundquist will be showing at Sag Harbor's Grenning Gallery in May.

SHADOW OF THE VAMPIRE
BATS ABOUT THE MOVIES?

Bela Lugosi, Bob Hope and Presidents like Calvin Coolidge could tell you . . . attempting Campiness in show business is an extremely dangerous tightrope act. The gross crudeness of Camp requires it to be drawn intelligently, as taut as a violinists G-string, to make that risky, fine line as firm and secure as possible. If it is gaudily cheap and as skimpy as a strippers G-string. . . one false step! and the performers embarrassing pitfalls are exposed for all to see and usually, as a consequence, the entire production is more than a big bust. Shadow Of A Vampire, is the most recent retelling of the scary (but, by this time, hairy) Dracula, the big-time sucker-of-a-legend. It could easily have wandered too far from Camp and nose-dived into a bottomless pit as abysmal as the last Presidential campaign. It could have . . . but, it didn't.

Shadow of the Vampire

IN HOT BLOOD

Riskier than others, this new fangster movie is more about the making of the 1922 fantastic silent movie version which pictured the vampire as looking like a particularly disgusting looking maggot with a face like a rat's behind, complete with rat's teeth . . . and, a nightmare presence that must have frightened the 1931 model, Bela Lugosi. The 1922 film entitled, Nosferatu, is a vivid example of German Expressionism in Cinema. This form has exerted immense influence on film making worldwide. It's exciting dark shadows cast themselves on Film Noir, blackened genres generally and, specifically, Citizen Kane. Shadow of The Vampires independent minded director, E. Elias Merhige, has saturated his film with this lurid, murky and lush inkiness and, mixed into it, as if with an artist's paintbrush, intellectual metaphors of film making likened to vampire-like devouring of the living as a sacrifice to Art . . . which will live eternally.

DIRECTORS AND ACTORS AS GODS AND MONSTERS

F.W. Murnau, was the intensely dedicated director and all-round auteur of 1920s, Nosferatu, who saw his films as bestowing immortality, regardless of cost! His leading lady bemoans "this thing takes the life from me." And, according to Mr. Merhige's film, this was literally true. Murnau's leading man, Max Schreck, was actually a real-life (or living dead) vampire. . . EEK!!

The incredible German actor, Schreck (English translation . . . SHRIEK!) amazingly filled the role. Also wonderfully; he is portrayed in Shadow by Willem Dafoe, an extremely fine player who, ordinarily goes un-noticed. Not in this one! Lions Gate Films, also distributors of Gods and Monsters, expect another acting Oscar. Mr. Weird, himself, John Malkovich, is as apt for the role of Murnau, as a bloodstain on a lace nightgown but, it is Dafoe who manages fright, humor, and, yes, even wisdom.

GETTING HIGH ON A-HIGHWIRE ACT

I don't believe you have to love film-making as much as the director of Shadow of the Vampire and, it's producer, actor Nicholas Cage, to know that the slips off the Camp tightrope are deliberate and, the terrifying plunges are into the mysterious chaos of profundity.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer/writer/director of award winning European films and Network TV. He has judged the major Film and TV award competitions. He is assisted in his column by Sarah Halsey.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Does eating chocolate containing that strange property, phenylethylamine, a chemical stimulant released by the brain offer a high level of passion? Well, studies have shown that it does and there are few better ways to end a Valentine's Day dinner than with a dessert made from chocolate.

For special occasions, anything chocolate has always been one of my favorite desserts. I love a dark, moist flourless chocolate cake, unadorned by icings and creams. It may not look magazine picture perfect, but it tastes divine. Especially when it isn't too sweet. Hot soufflés may be something you order in French restaurants when they are on the menu. It really isn't that difficult to do at home. The most important aspect of making a soufflé is to properly beat the egg whites and to have a reliable oven. A chocolate soufflé is particularly simple with just a chocolate, milk and egg yolk base into which beaten egg whites are folded in. Separate eggs when cold and use whites at room temperature since they will expand more when beaten to help the soufflé rise. Chocolate mousse Basque, with its rich gelatinous texture, is the best chocolate mousse I ever tasted. It's perfect party fare that can be made one or two days ahead.

Working with chocolate can be tricky. Care should be taken when melting or it can turn lumpy if heat is too high. Break chocolate into pieces and melt in an oven or over very low heat in the top of a double boiler.

Valentine's Day comes but once a year, a time to splurge on Chocolate desserts.

CHOCOLATE MOUSSE BASQUE

This uncommonly delicious mousse has a rich gelatinous texture Serves 10-12

- 4 eggs
- 6 ounces imported semisweet chocolate
- 2 tablespoons strong coffee
- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 1 cup heavy cream

Garnish
1/2 cup heavy cream
Candied violets (optional)

1. Separate eggs while cold. Place whites in a large mixing bowl; yolks in a small bowl and allow whites to come to room temperature.

2. Break up chocolate in small pieces and put in a heavy saucepan. Add coffee and melt over very low heat, or place in a small heatproof bowl and melt in a 250-degree oven about 10 minutes. When mixture appears soft, remove from heat and stir to a smooth cream. Stir in 1 tablespoon butter at a time to the hot chocolate mixture until well blended. Add egg yolks, one at a time, and stir until thoroughly incorporated.

3. In a bowl of electric mixer or in mixing bowl with hand electric beaters, beat egg whites until foamy. Add cream of tartar, adjust speed to medium-high, and continue to beat until soft peaks form. As peaks begin to take shape gradually add sugar, one table at a time. Continue beating about 1 minute until whites are very firm and shiny. With a large rubber spatula, spoon about one-fourth of the beaten egg whites into the chocolate mixture and stir to soften. Carefully fold in remaining whites until thoroughly softened.

4. Whip cream in a cold bowl with cold beaters until the beaters drawn across the top of the cream leave light traces; then carefully fold into mousse. Transfer mixture to an attractive serving bowl or soufflé dish.

5. To garnish: Whip 1/2 cup cream until stiff. Spoon cream into a pastry bag fitted with star tip and pipe a row of rosettes around the rim of the bowl. Top rosettes with candied violets.

HOT CHOCOLATE SOUFFLE

Serves 6-8

- 6 ounces imported bittersweet chocolate
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon unsalted butter
- 2 inch piece vanilla bean, split and scraped or 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract
- 4 egg yolks
- 7 egg whites
- Pinch salt
- 3 tablespoons sugar

To serve: Confectioners sugar
Crème Chantilly or vanilla ice cream

Butter a 1 1/2 quart soufflé dish and dust with sugar
Preheat oven to 400 degrees

1. Break chocolate into small pieces and put in a heavy saucepan. Add milk and butter and melt over very low heat. Or place in a heatproof bowl and melt in a 250-degree oven, about 10 minutes. When mixture appears soft, remove from heat, and stir to a smooth cream. Cool then add vanilla and stir to mix. Whisk in egg yolks, one at a time until thoroughly incorporated.

2. In a bowl of electric mixer or in mixing bowl with electric hand beaters, beat egg whites until foamy. Add pinch of salt, adjust speed to medium-high, and continue to beat until soft peaks form. As peaks begin to take shape gradually add sugar one tablespoon at a time. Continue beating about 1 minute until whites are very firm and shiny. With a large rubber spatula, spoon about one-fourth of the beaten egg whites into the chocolate base and stir to soften. Carefully fold in remaining whites until thoroughly incorporated. Pour into prepared soufflé dish.

3. Put soufflé on a cookie sheet and place on middle rack in preheated oven. Bake 5 minutes. Reduce oven temperature to 375 degrees and bake for 15-16 minutes longer. Sprinkle confectioner's sugar through a sieve over the soufflé. Using two large spoons, scoop the hot soufflé from the center and serve, if desired, with crème Chantilly or vanilla ice cream.

ELIZABETH DAVID'S FLOURLESS CHOCOLATE CAKE

*Elizabeth David, the noted British cookbook author, wrote widely on Mediterranean cooking.
Yield: 1 8-inch cake*

- 4 ounces imported bittersweet chocolate
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 tablespoon brewed espresso (or any very strong coffee)
- 1 tablespoons brandy
- 6 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup ground almonds
- 3 large eggs, separated
- 1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
- Confectioners sugar for decoration

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Butter an 8-inch springform pan and dust with flour or breadcrumbs.

1. Break up chocolate in small pieces and put in a heavy saucepan with vanilla, coffee and Brandy. Melt over very low heat, or place in a small heatproof bowl and melt in a 250-degree oven. When mixture appears soft, remove from heat and stir to a smooth cream. Return saucepan to burner top and add butter sugar and almonds to heat slowly until butter is melted. Transfer to a mixing bowl.

2. In a small bowl beat egg yolks until they are lemon colored, about 3-4 minutes, and stir them into the chocolate mixture.

3. In a bowl of electric mixer or in bowl with electric hand beaters, beat egg whites until foamy. Add cream of tartar, adjust speed to medium high and continue beating until egg whites are very firm and stiff peaks form. Fold about one-fourth of the beaten whites into the chocolate mixture and stir to soften. Carefully fold in remaining whites until thoroughly incorporated.

4. Transfer batter into the prepared pan and bake in the middle of the oven for 45 minutes. The cake will have some cracks on top and a cake tester inserted in the center will not come out clean. The cake will rise and then fall. Let the cake cool completely on a rack. Run a knife around the side of the pan and remove the side of the springform. Dust with confectioner's sugar for serving.

The above recipe is adapted from Elizabeth David's French Provincial Cooking.

TAX TERROR

Tax Time. Believe it or not, the season has come upon us again. The filing process has been modernized this year; now you can file taxes without ever picking up a pen. Do you have to file your taxes? Of course you do. That was a silly question. Here are some not-so-silly websites that will get you out of your tax jam.

GOVERNMENT

www.irs.gov — Always your starting-point, the IRS's official web site offers a range of tax services and plenty of information. Newcomers to the tax-paying game must visit the "tax interactive" site for an understanding of why and how we pay taxes. IRS statistics, information, regulations, and downloadable forms for the business or individual are just a few topics covered on the site. By the way, the IRS is hiring. See the online job listings.

www.tax.state.ny.us — The official web site of the New York State department of taxation and finance offers downloadable forms, filing assistance, and general information.

www.fourmilab.to/uscode/26usc/ustax.html — Curious about the legalities of paying taxes? This site contains the complete text of the United States Internal Revenue Code, Title 26 of the U.S. Code (26 USC). Be careful not to get lost in the code, the text is long enough to fill 6000 letter-size pages.

www.firstgov.gov — The search engine of the U.S. Government, this site can really come in handy. Whether you are looking for information on filing taxes or the location of a national park, the necessary links are all here.

ADVICE AND INFORMATION

www.parkavenuetax.com — Based out of Manhattan, this tax consultants' web site has a comprehensive listing of useful tax links. Free advice and the details of recent settlements are also interesting reads. Offers free initial telephone consultations.

www.e1040.com — "Make your taxes less taxing" with the help of e1040.com. Though the entire site is informative, the "quickie tax calculator" is most useful. Plug in a few of your numbers and the calculator will produce a tax estimate. Try the "risk evaluator" for an idea of your chances of being audited.

www.fool.com — If you have been searching for a lesson on electronic filing or a seminar on how to save big when filing your taxes, look no further. The reliable Motley Fool site will guide you through the tax-filing experience.

E-FILE

This year, for the first time, you can file paperless, electronic tax returns. This convenient option offers the benefits of timely processing, fewer errors, and direct deposit refunds. Though the service is free, the filing software comes at a price. Most companies advertise free use of the software with a charge for filing. The prices of filing range around $12 to $20. Listed below is a sampling of IRS-recommended e-filing software companies.

SALSA SWING DANCE AT TIERRA MAR Tierra Mar (288-2700) will hold a "Latin Lover's Salsa Swing Dance" on Thursday, February 15th. The evening will feature a $25 three-course prix fixe dinner and dancing to live music from Oscar Gonzales and Krompier Entertainment. The dinner starts at 6 p.m. and dancing starts at 8 p.m. Some items from the evening's menu include endive, radicchio and local organic arugula with toasted walnuts and gorgonzola cheese; pan seared peppercorn crusted certified Angus Hanger steak and classic crème brulee. Their regular a la carte menu will also be available from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m.

75 MAIN'S ANNIVERSARY 75 Main (283-7575) is running dinner specials to celebrate their 10th anniversary. Sunday through Thursday they will serve a $21.95 prix fixe; and Monday through Friday a pre-movie menu is offered at $16.75 from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m.

HERE ARE SOME SUGGESTIONS FOR RESERVATIONS ON VALENTINE'S DAY:

A ROMANTIC VALENTINE'S DAY DINNER AT DELLA FEMINA Della Femina (329-6666) will celebrate Valentine's Day with a special prix fixe dinner, which will be offered in addition to their regular a la carte menu. The cost for the prix fixe is $49 per person. The menu includes such selections as a welcome canapé with glass of champagne; Wellfleet oysters with shallot cucumber mignonette; seared Maine diver scallops with potato mousseline, baby pea shoots and sweet carrot broth; warm gooey center valhrona chocolate cake with cappuccino gelato.

RAM'S HEAD VALENTINE'S DINNER & DANCE Reservations are being taken for the Ram's Head Inn (749-0811) St. Valentine's Day dinner and dance on Wednesday, Feb. 14. The four-course dinner includes dessert and such tempting selections as the following: oven roasted oysters with tomato shallot vinaigrette; roast pheasant with hunter sauce; and poached spiced pears with ginger crisp over crème anglaise.

VALENTINE'S DAY AT THE MAIDSTONE ARMS Chef Bill Valentine (how appropriate is that?) of The Maidstone Arms (324-5006) will prepare a special prix fixe dinner for Valentine's Day. The three-course meal will include a glass of champagne and a rose for the ladies for $58 per person. The meal will be available from 6 to 10 p.m.

VALENTINE'S DAY AT NICK & TONI'S Nick and Toni's (324-3550) will open for Valentine's Day and will serve their regular menu plus a few Valentine specials. Dinner will be served from 6 to 10 p.m.

GURNEYS VALENTINE'S DAY The Sea Grille

at Gurney's Inn in Montauk (668-2345) will offer a complete Valentine's Day dinner for two for $110, excluding tax and gratuity. The four-course dinner includes dessert and a bottle of Korbel brut champagne. Valentine get-a-way packages are also available.

THE DISH HEARS THAT . . . Guess Alan Alda and his family aren't big Giants fans or fans of reality TV. The clan celebrated Alda's birthday at Della Femina on January 29th (A.K.A. Super Bowl/Survivor Sunday). The party of eight included Alda's wife, daughters and grandkids. They dined on hand-cut fettuccine, aged prime rib steak and black sea bass and they brought in their own special birthday cake for the occasion . . .

Scaling Down As You Move Up

Whether you're scaling down from a house to a condo to simplify life at retirement or moving from a house in the country into the city for a career opportunity, chances are that your new city apartment or condominium will be smaller than your country house. There are many things to consider as you plan your move, not the least of which is what to do with all of your "stuff." Here are some suggestions:

Sell it. While you still have a yard, plan a yard sale. This takes some planning and advertising to be successful, but you will be surprised by what people will buy and how much money you will have at the end of the day. Martha Stewart wrote a very good article about "tag" sales, which can only be described as upscale versions of "yard" sales, i.e., yard sales with lots of antiques and collectables as opposed to tupperware, dented pans and souvenir ashtrays. She suggested using tie-on paper tags (I've taken this one step further and used old-style, string-tie tags, especially on the nicer, antique items); this little touch is really worth the effort. She also stacked linens (using those same tags) to look as if they were for sale in a boutique instead of on your lawn. How many times have you seen towels, napkins and sheets for sale at a yard sale just dumped into a basket, full of wrinkles? This looks more like laundry than items for sale. The message here? A little effort will be rewarded with faster sales and less price haggling.

Make sure that you are honest with yourself over whether or not you really need to keep some things. Get rid of duplicate items, lawn furniture, gardening tools and all of those things that have accumulated in your basement over the years and you never got around to using. A little ruthlessness here will be rewarded; the more you get rid of, the less you have to move.

Give it away. Consider donating to local charities and schools. A school may be able to use your old

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face... Choosing The Right Foundation

I suppose it's fair to say that a good face is like a home. they both need a great foundation. Choosing the right one for your face can be confusing not to mention wrong. There are so many colors, shades and mediums that one can rightfully so, leave it in the hands of a makeup artist. But even they can't know how your skin is going to react all the time. However, we have a huge range of formulas today that it is much easier to make that decision if you go to the makeup counter informed. One of the oldest is the 'pancake' makeup'. I steer clients away from them, they tend to be drying. The next is the liquid. You can obtain light to medium coverage. It has oil-free for oily skin with a matte finish and a satin for dryer skin.

Cream is next up on the list. It also offers and light to medium coverage. The consistency can be thinned or left the same simply by adding a little moisturizer on your sponge when applying. Blending is sort of a chore with this one. 'The Stick', my personal favorite, works best on older skin types but can be used on just about anyone. Max Factor puts out a beautiful one, called Seamless 'Makeup Stick'. It sells for around $6.50. It does just what the name implies. It goes on silky smooth and it is hard to find a line of demarcation. You can also use these as a concealer. There are gel and powder finish types to choose from. There is also Lancome's 'Dual Finish Powder'. It acts great alone as your makeup or used with water as a foundation. A gentle warning here...if you do decide to use it as a foundation and use water...it doesn't seem to be able to double as a powder after that. It makes the powder sort of slick and therefore loses the powder touch.

A great color for a medium color skin type is their 'Matte Buff'. You can also purchase 'Tinted Moisturizers'. There isn't much of a coverage with these but they do add a glow to the face and can be gotten in a wide range of natural tones. Matching the skin tone is next up on the list. It should be chosen as close to your skin color as possible. And not by the lights in the store! Put a bit on your face, not your hand and check it out in daylight. If you are going to be putting a powder over it and you should be if you are going to be applying any eyeshadows or blushes, make sure to include them in your daylight test. There are so many different hues you need to watch out for as well. Do you have an undertone of pink to your skin? Or how about yellow? These need to be taken into consideration as well.

That is another column in itself! For now, try to find the best foundation for you. If you need any help, feel free to email me and I will do my best to help you.

POLICE BLOTTER

I shot a gun into the air, it fell to earth I know not where. On Lumber Lane in Bridgehampton a woman returned to her house and found a bullet had entered her living room through the window and ricocheted from the back of the room into the dining room. She found it on the rug. It had doubtless been fired by a hunter. The understandably upset homeowner was informed by the police that that hunter was allowed in Southampton Township so long as they were shooting 500 feet from a house. Whether the gunman in question was disobeying the law or was disoriented is not known. The homeowner said, "If I had been sitting in my living room having coffee I'd be dead."

A gentleman (that may be a euphemism) was arrested outside the East Hampton House – high up outside the establishment. Claudio R. Figueroa was apprehended on a fifteen foot tall ladder while he was allegedly peering into a window. The police report does not indicate just whom or what Mr. Figueroa was spying upon. He was released on $100 bail. Perhaps he might invest in a pair of binoculars, so as not to be so near the scene of the crime, so to speak.

East Hampton Police went on not one but two high speed chases when a pair of cars were observed speeding together in Wainscott. The vehicles would not pull over for police and led authorities through Mecox, Bridgehampton and Watermill. One of the cars was finally halted by Southampton Town Police on Route 27 near Hayground Road; East Hampton Town

Police caught the other driver on Narrow Lane off Scuttlehole Road. The two drivers were charged with reckless driving, aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle in the third degree.

And furthermore.... A woman told police that, while driving, she turned to say something to her daughter in the back seat – and subsequently went off the road into a LIPA pole and cracked it in half at the base.

A Southampton woman was arrested by Southampton Village Police in regards to a November incident at Buckley's Irish Pub in which she is charged with throwing a glass at a patron there. The object hit the patron in the face and the individual had to be treated at Southampton Hospital. So much for the luck of the Irish.

Robert Davis, the former chief mechanic for the Suffolk County Sheriff's office, has pled guilty to all kinds of shennigans, specifically to 58 counts of felony and misdemeanors. He stole equipment and cash from the county, handed in false vouchers for auto parts and services and also knowingly inaccurate time sheets for overtime in regards to the crash of TWA Flight 800 in 1996. Mr. Davis had used $15,500 in cash from the phony vouchers to buy a Jeep and a cargo truck.

computer that you were planning on replacing anyway (and these things can be beasts to move!). The local library may be thrilled to have those boxes of books you never unpacked, even when you had all that space in your house. Clothing and household items can be given to the Salvation Army or other local charity and you can save your receipt and receive a tax deduction.

Store it. Give it all a good, hard look. Will it fit into your new place? Try to imagine where everything will go after you've moved in or, better yet, draw out a floor plan and move your furniture, books, plants, etc. around on it so that you have an idea of how everything will fit. Do you own some things that you just can't bear to part with but there is just not enough space in your new place? Forget about boxing things up and storing them down your friend's moldy basement. Store it in a professional storage facility; the mildew you spare yourself will be worth the extra expense of storage. If the items you can't part with are worth anything, they won't be by the time you unwrap them after spending a year or two down in the average basement.

Self-storage is the best choice for you if you want to be able to visit your things when you feel like it. If you have a moving/storage company store them for you, you will not have access except by appointment.

What about the car?

If you currently own a car and are moving from a rural or suburban area to a metropolitan one, you'll need to consider where, and even if, you will keep your automobile. Consider your future commute. Factor in the cost of renting a space in a parking garage if this is your only option; this can be expensive and you may also end up having to walk quite a distance from your apartment to get it. Do you really need an automobile? Consider the possibility of renting a car when you want or need to get out of town. Don't forget to factor in the money you will save from not owning a vehicle, including insurance, repairs, fuel and general maintenance.

Once you've settled into your new space, you'll find that the time you've invested has really paid off by making your transition that much smoother.

Montauk: By the Bay. Here's a new listing, composed of three bedrooms, two baths on a double lot with detached 2 car garage. Private beach rights available by membership, perfect for the handyman. Appointment, please. $325,000.

Paul Goldberger Liked It. This dramatic and intriguing home was picked by one of the top architectural critics of our time to be in his book, Houses of the Hamptons. And with good reason. Designed by a world famous architect and situated on almost 2 full acres in a heavenly forest of white pines, it has 5 bedrooms, a heated pool, an attached garage, a delightful screened porch and a permit in hand to build a tennis court. It's being offered for sale furnished. All in all, an outstanding value at the asking price of $795,000.
